About Tesequite

Tesequite is a little village that oozes peace and tranquillity. Its fields in blossom in spring, or simply a few drops of a timid rainfall, provide food for herds of goats and sheep and make the perfect setting for the few constructions that are found here, faithful to the forms of traditional architecture.

Of particular note is the chapel of San Leandro (17th century) which stands in a charming paved square, from where we can see other nearby settlements such as El Mojón and Los Valles. Throughout this area you can find typical houses which are now dedicated to rural tourism.
